What a player gets, and their rights · Draft for review

GPS is built around the player as much as the organiser. This document sets out what a player can expect from GPS and how to exercise their rights. It aligns with the GPS Rule Book, the OWPR ranking method, and the GPA statutes.

1. One open ranking

- Every GPS result enters OWPR, a single open world ranking, under one published rule — the same window, plateau and decay for every event, wherever it was played.
- The method is public (owpr.org): a player can see exactly how their position is built. Nothing is adjusted by hand.
- Points are declared before each event is played, so a player always knows what is at stake in advance.

2. One profile across circuits

- A player has a single ranking identity across all adhered circuits, instead of a separate, unconnected ranking per tour.
- Results from different circuits are read on the same scale, so they are comparable.

3. Transparency and fairness

- The points matrix (by round and category) and the OWPR method are published.
- Seeding in GPS events uses the player's position/ranking at the registration deadline.
- Protected ranking: players who miss events due to verified medical reasons may apply to retain their position for a defined period.
- Wild-card players earn points on the same basis as everyone else.

4. You still enter with the organiser

- GPS does not take entries, charge for them, or hold a parallel list. A player enters with the organiser, as always; GPS adds the calendar line, the declared points and the ranking.

5. Data and privacy

- GPS/OWPR process only the data needed to run the ranking (name, results, category, nationality/venue of events).
- Privacy terms are published (globalpadelseries.com, owpr.org). A player may request access, correction or deletion of their personal data per the published privacy policy and applicable law.
- GPS does not sell player data.

6. Questions, corrections and appeals

- Results/points queries: a player who believes a result or its points are wrong can request a review. First line: the organiser of the event. If unresolved, escalate to GPS (the country franchise / regional contractor), and finally to the ranking review under the OWPR regulation.
- Conduct/sanctions: handled by the event referee and organiser per the Rule Book; serious cases are referred to GPS.
- Timeframe: queries are acknowledged and routed; corrections, when due, are made in the next ranking update and noted.

7. What GPS does not do

- It does not represent players commercially, does not guarantee prize money (that is the organiser's), and does not sanction or homologate competitions outside its own calendar. GPA regulates inward and cooperates outward.

8. Channel

- Player service contact: the organiser first; for GPS-level matters, gps@globalpadelassociation.com (or the country franchise's published channel).
